

Captain Curious (by Rafaella in 6G)

Captain Curious could never look at an object without asking questions. She noticed things, always looked for patterns and connections no matter the situation she was in. She was always going on quests and adventures to find answers to her long list of questions. She always took responsibility for her learning and liked to use her imagination. This was one of her best features as she always used this to think of new ideas and questions.

Read how Captain Curious helped Carly Camel to take responsibility for her own learning.

Captain Curious helps Carly Camel

Captain Curious and Carly Camel were strolling across the desert, when they saw some enormous things built of stone. Carly had never seen anything like them before and had no idea what they were. Captain Curious encouraged Carly to take responsibility for her own learning and find out what they are. So, Carly decided to ask her friend Malik, but Malik was not able to answer her question. Instead of giving up, Carly thought 'What if I ask my friend Jas?' so off she trotted to ask him but Jas didn't know what the huge stone things were either! She kept on asking all her friends, but none of them could give her an answer. She almost gave up, but Captain Curious spoke to her about other ways she could find out the answer to her question. Carly stopped and pondered. 'I know', she said excitedly. 'We could go to the Desert Library and have a look at some of the books in there for the answer.' Captain Curious thought this was an excellent idea so off they trekked across the sand to the Desert Library. They reached the library and Carly started to look at all the books on the shelves until she came across one called 'Big Stone Desert Buildings'. Carly took the book and started to flick through the pages eagerly. Eventually, she came across a picture which looked the like the enormous stone statues she had seen. She started to read the information next to the picture. "They are called pyramids." the camel exclaimed happily. Carly was so glad that she had kept asking her question until she had found the answer.

Do you know of any other ways you can use to find the answers to questions?

