

L.O. To use detailed description to portray character, setting and atmosphere

(W)
I learnt a new word
today.

Sailing along with no struggle, Odysseus fell asleep as the scintillating sun shone upon them. Silly Seagulls squawked as the boat travelled with the slight <sup>breeze</sup> gust of wind from the sack. As far as the eye could see, was just carpets of aquamarines <sup>while</sup> <sup>lapped</sup> sea, waves lapping softly against the boat's sides.

setting
opening

He decided that it would be fine as he opened it just a bit. After the sack had been opened chaos struck. Poseidon

After the sack had been opened, chaos struck. Poseidon! now had all the tools <sup>needed</sup> to avenge his son. Grey clouds ~~drifted~~ enveloped all the light, blocking it from view. The boat shook violently and the sea <sup>clattered</sup> rumbled with anger. Odysseus, who woke with a jolt of brine in his eyes, ~~start~~ started frantically opening the sail, hoping the wind would <sup>guide</sup> take them another direction, but <sup>soon Odysseus realised</sup> that was a big mistake. <sup>That wind drove them closer</sup> Their fragile boat <sup>to the shore</sup> was tossed left and right, ~~up~~ up and down, out of control.

There was no turning back. <sup>now</sup> Everyone was now trying everything to save themselves. Using the wheel, it broke, Closing the sail, it made no difference. Black waves <sup>crashed</sup> crashed forcefully, <sup>nearly</sup> destroying the tiny boat. ~~Crash!~~ Lightning punched the sky with a blinding streak of light. Thunder hit the sky with a ~~deafening~~ deafening roar like the gods were creating it themselves. It was over for Odysseus.

✓ Wow! You've portrayed character, setting and atmosphere well. Great work today Yashna.
