

They strike again!!!!

Children, I can't believe it! Imagine my surprise when I turned up for work today and found something very strange on the floor of my office.

What looked like some polystyrene from boxes and an empty sweet packet greeted me.

I checked the cameras to see what or who had caused the mess and found some interesting footage.

It looks like those naughty elves were having a sleep over in my office on the table and had used the polystyrene to make some pillows.
I wonder where they managed to get the socks from?!? That is still a mystery

They then seemed to make their escape out of one of my windows, before I could catch them in the morning.
Please be on the lookout for them and also for anyone who may be missing some socks!!!!