

The Life Cycle of Horrous Hideous

Horrous Hideous is finally a riptor and has three teeth left. If it is a male, it will hang its tongue out to attract women. It has a brain on top of its head that changes colour depending on its mood. The females carry for 3 years, their muppies for 3 years. The dad goes out with the mum to hunt, but they both have different roles. The man will get ready to pounce while the woman distracts the prey.

two words

This is a very good description of the life cycle of a riptor. You used a range of sentence types and punctuation. PR look up the difference between everyone and every one. Record it here. Everyone - everybody. Every one - each one.

Friday 6th January 2017

Horrous Hideous is born a "muppy" who is independent and doesn't need to rely on its family that much. It has good eyesight so that as soon as the "muppy" is born, it can make its way around the den. Unlike other animals and creatures, it is born with all of its teeth and can catch small animals for itself; however, this doesn't mean that it is not looked after. It goes out hunting with up to nine other siblings to ensure a good meal.

At this stage, it is now a "mild" and starts losing teeth. Now it only hunts as a group to take down animals bigger than itself. The "milds" get along and co-operate; although it can tolerate its own kind, the "mild" does not take well to other animals and miptours (except small ones). It has a unique way to sleep: Horrous Hideous stands on its head.

This creature is now a "meenager" and develops slimy skin to track down its prey. It is now at its highest eating level and can now be hunting with all of its siblings. They hunt for lions and tigers. This does not work out well because the "meenagers" don't get on as well as they used to. They start being selfish and even when they catch their meals, not everyone of them gets to eat that day. Unfortunately, this can go wrong. If the same "meenager" doesn't get any food in three days in a row, as it can die.